

Allies needed 'for all generations'

The main purpose of the initiators of the Information Centre near the Canadian Cemetery at the Holterberg was to keep the memory of the Second World war and particularly our liberators alive. The centre near to the impressive military cemetery has meanwhile been realised by financial support from authorities, businesses and individuals. Inside the Centre the 1394 graves will all tell their own story, by using personal anecdotes, diaries, photographs, films and official documents. A mine of information about the graveyard is being presented.

A unique collection, which we would like to keep open for the public for many years to come. In September 2011 the doors were opened and till now we have received just more than 100.000 visitors. In order to keep access available for everyone there is no entrance fee. Volunteers take care of supervision and management of the centre. A small group of volunteers take care for research and up grading the content of the collections.

But even without professional expenses support is needed for exploitation and maintenance of the building and the collection. We hope to acquire this support mainly by donation from the population of Holland and Canada.
